

Matt Parrott's New Show on Richard Spencer's "Death to America" Network -- This is Fine

News

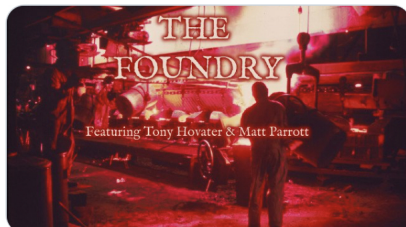

Fash_McQueen 2019-02-02 07:30:15 UTC #1

Matt Parrott @MatthewParrott · 2h

Don't miss the premiere of The Foundry, a livestream on dedicated to nationalist career, lifestyle, and activist considerations.

It will be co-hosted by @TonyHovater and myself on the HEELTURN Network on Sundays at 6pm.

1 8 24

OF COURSE!

It was only a matter of time before Spencer, The Wignat King, gave a show to Captain Cuckbox and the new leader of TWP, Tony Hovater!

And gee – what a shock that Matt Parrott's new show on Spencer's "Death to America" Network is called "The Foundry".

Communism at the British Museum

November 2, 2017 – Since the October Revolution in Russia in 1917, many countries around the world have adopted a form of communist government, by adapting Marxist theory to suit a set of diverse economic and geographic conditions. A form of communism has subsequently been brought to more than 20 countries around the world. Drawing on the British Museum's remarkable collection, this display explores how money works and what it looks like under communism.

Yugoslavia, 5000 dinara, 1950. The foundry was a common motif in Socialist art, a metaphor for the forging of the communism state. © The Trustees of the British Museum.

But don't worry. – Everyone assures us that Richard Spencer isn't really a propaganda problem for the pro-White movement as he continues to build a rapidly-growing network of shows with the goal of turning the Alt-Right into a Marxist/communist, anti-Christian, anti-American, neo-pagan cult.

If we just ignore him, he'll magically go away.

You know – like cancer does.

Stormy 2019-02-02 08:40:19 UTC #2

The Foundry? Oh jeez.

Supposedly, Parrott is a Christian, however.

Goyim_Revolution 2019-02-02 08:48:50 UTC #4

I can't believe they didn't call the show The Cuckbox. Dissapoint.

itsshoahime 2019-02-02 08:51:15 UTC #5

I never cared for Richard Spencer. I never understood the obsession some people had with him. On TRS quite a few treated him like some kind of god or king.

I always found him to be ridiculous.

coltraine9 2019-02-02 08:53:45 UTC #6

Spencer kills every project he touches... Bringing Parrot into the mix at an official capacity merely hastens the self-destruction...

I'd be willing to wager that the entire HeelTurn network will not even be around anywhere on the internet come the half-way mark of the 2019 year...

This is a stream war. You should all immediately subscribe to TKR's streaming channel here
<https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCa8c98Wphwik9IqNTWJd87A>

Make sure and click the bell so you get notifications of every stream.

And the TKR Vault where we archive the streams here
<https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCCFctdl4LcqR8MXREn31sNQ>

We called out Heel Turn's faggotry once already. Get those subs up and let's zerg rush them off the interwebs.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-02 11:38:53 UTC #9

You do realize that he is effectively scuttling the Heel Turn network with this move, right?

Azzmador 2019-02-02 11:50:50 UTC #10

Any Stormers still subscribed to this nonsense channel should unsubscribe immediately.

coltraine9 2019-02-02 12:06:41 UTC #11

That's what I think too... I said HeelTurn will be lucky to even exist by mid-2019... I'll be surprised if it does anyway...

Azzmador 2019-02-02 12:09:03 UTC #12

coltraine9:

I said HeelTurn will be lucky to even exist by mid-2019

For what reason? You think their channel will be banned?

It's weird that it has not been.

coltraine9 2019-02-02 12:11:37 UTC #13

I think Spencer will just blow it up himself eventually... I've watched him for several years now and he cannot stick to any single project for too long... Plus, I've watched some of the content on that channel and it's just really not that good... I bet Spencer will move on to something else within the next 6 months or so...

Azzmador 2019-02-02 12:13:26 UTC #14

He had Parrott on his stream last night. He is desperate for friends.

Dormantique 2019-02-02 12:13:44 UTC #15

the 'ethnic melting pot' is a communist idea.

coltraine9 2019-02-02 12:15:20 UTC #16

Azzmador:

He is desperate for friends.

Another thing about him (and I've known people like this myself IRL) is that every 6 months or so he has an entirely new group of friends around him... But eventually they too figure him out- and they leave...

Azzmador 2019-02-02 12:16:36 UTC #17

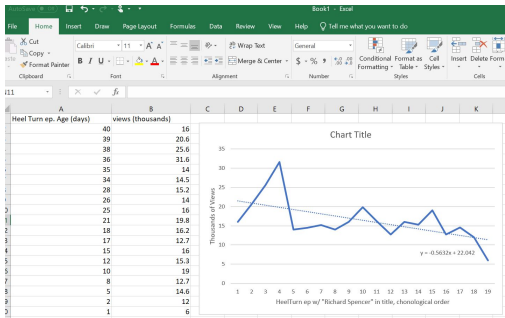

That's typical of sloppy drunks. Can't keep friends. But the TWP crowd will never abandon him. Even if he fucks their women.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-02 13:24:54 UTC #18

Azzmador:

For what reason? You think their channel will be banned?

Because math.

There is no way this move doesn't double the negative slope of that trendline.

ghosteroven 2019-02-02 13:26:38 UTC #19

All this shit wouldn't be that big of deal if Spencer didn't have such brand recognition. Even my father has heard of him. Spencer is the only name he knows as far as "alt right" politics is concerned.

Normies are becoming more aware, thanks to the Overton window shift. People like Tucker are now amplifying our views. Normies will start looking for alternatives for answers, looking further "right", as we all did.

As we know, the MSM has learned to ghost websites like DS and TRS, refusing to cover them for fear of drawing attention. This isn't the case with Spencer, he is kept in the Jews toolbox and utilized when necessary as more or less, bait. People who get caught up in the wignat trap, as many good men have, will have their lives ruined. This creates the opposite effect of what wignats think they are achieving, it creates a chilling effect.

We know the deal and took losses the first go around. Newer people looking for answers during this new attempt for a second round of tricking the naive do not fully understand the consequences. They could potentially be fooled into going into the streets in poor fashion, or let their views known through bad optics/opsec. More lives will be ruined, and demoralize more from seeking real world ways of moving forward with what is good for our people.

nwnO 2019-02-02 13:30:58 UTC #20

I listened to an episode of Heelturn a while back. Didnt make it past 10 minutes. Boring and gay.

TKR has nothing to worry about.

Azzmador 2019-02-02 13:32:05 UTC #21

well, of course our show gets more listeners by a huge factor, but our YT channels are new and have about 1 tenth of the subs, so we need to remedy that.

Azzmador 2019-02-02 13:40:56 UTC #22

The term comes from a late 19th century Jewish play.

fukuyama 2019-02-02 13:44:12 UTC #23

nwNO 2019-02-02 13:47:37 UTC #25

Once the word spreads about your new channel I'm sure those numbers will improve. It may take some time. Bottom line, your show is as hilarious as it is entertaining. Most streams available now are remarkably bland in comparison.

fukuyama 2019-02-02 13:50:37 UTC #26

this is true. these channels take time to grow.

SabrinaVanZant 2019-02-02 14:08:26 UTC #27

These constant livestreams and podcasts give the listener the illusion that something is actually being done to improve our situation. Instead of self-improvement, reading, gathering information on his/her own, and going out and doing things, the listener is duped into thinking that the hosts of said livestreams and podcasts are actively making things better. Thus, there is no reason for the listener to make any moves.

It used to be that these podcasts, etc. were meant to entertain and inform. But now there are so many of them, it's all about the shekel grab, the dopamine hits, and the scratching and clawing to be THE guy that everyone is listening to.

It almost seems like a Jewish plot to sedate the goyim with YouTube so we continue to sit on our asses while Person X assures you that he's doing all the work so we don't have to.

Trust me, goy. I'll tell you what to think.

I can't speak for these other faggots, but everything I do is done with the goal of getting people to wake up and do something about all this shit. And I don't take myself so seriously, and realize that my first responsibility is to entertain.

ghosteroven 2019-02-02 14:25:14 UTC #31

Well said.

Pandadude12345 2019-02-02 14:26:05 UTC #32

I don't know how and why Spencer is still considered the alt-right leader. (Hey, I can give out likes again)

SabrinaVanZant 2019-02-02 14:28:05 UTC #33

There are a few exceptions to the "rule" I laid out, you being one of them. The dynamic that's going on with these newer livestreams/podcasts is less "we're in this together" and more "we have all the answers, goy."

There's something weird going on. It's coordinated and completely inorganic.

But I have a feeling the breaking cuckbox will be a whole lot bigger this time around.

Azzmador 2019-02-02 14:36:52 UTC #34

have you subscribed to the channels yet?

SabrinaVanZant 2019-02-02 14:37:30 UTC #35

Of coooooooooooooourse!

Dormantique 2019-02-02 14:41:36 UTC #36

Israel Zangwill was a card-carrying member of the Communist Party, like all Zionists before Stalin purged them. The play is about the evil Russian tsar pogromming the jews to flee to America. The play advocates for communist policies such as open borders and miscegenation.

The communist revolution was a reaction to the pogroms and Russification. Atrocities like the Holodomor were justified with 'at least it's not a pogrom'.

He presented the idea of the melting pot in its most glorified form, but we have much more honest and therefore cynical presentations of the idea by his disciples, like 'diversity is our strength'.

The melting pot is a symbol of the power of proletariat. The idea that proletarian solidarity should gain hegemony over ethnic solidarity is communist.

Yeah, that's the White-Pill I keep trying to feed myself.

Everything Spencer touches usually turns to shit and falls apart.

That usually happens because Spencer is a lazy drunk who can't follow through on anything.

What makes this Spencer project different is the fact that he really doesn't have to do anything to keep the Network going except walk from his bed to his computer camera to do his show.

All of his wignat minions handle everything else.

The only other thing Spencer has to do is decide which communist, Marxist, Satanist, or wignat he wants to give a show to next.

manny 2019-02-02 15:37:48 UTC #40

It seems like the originator of the channel 'joachim' had to distance himself for fear of being doxed and brought in Spencer as a stop gap or maybe a last gamble before abandoning the channel. Parrott though...bizarre... Looks like they are suiciding the whole channel for some reason.

I think their impersonators Arnel and Air Jordan Peterson are brilliant though. Those guys will live on no matter where they land.

Dormantique 2019-02-02 16:16:19 UTC #41

Except his own narcissism will eventually drive his minions away just like he drove away everyone who was working with him at NPI. He didn't do shit at NPI except make bad decisions against the advice of his subordinates. He will do the same here and scuttle his own ship. Also something else to think about is that in July he will be broke once he loses his court case, after that he will probably need to go lay low somewhere so he can try to get a job at McDonalds to pay the bills.

This, so much. YT is a passive medium. Podcasts less so, because YT occupies your eyes not just your ears. Fortunately, though, a lot of people treat YT just as a podcast hub and go other things while it is on the background.

Yeah, see...the success of a model like this depends on the quality of your help. Think about the quality of people that were part of the NPI crew. Now, think about the quality of people who are in a literal trailer trash skin head gang led by a guy that fell off a milk crate while watch his 200lb slut wife getting fucked by the 300 lb wigger that used to lead the gang.

Think about it.

Also, his main draw in 2016/2017 was his willingness to go out into meat space and interact with the 11 o'clock Jews. Well, guess what: He cant do that anymore.

There are very particular skill sets required to get someone with his target value in and out of the kinds of places he has to get into to do his thing, without him getting his dome caved in and without anyone getting arrested. You think the trailer trash salvaged from the ruins of the collapsed cuck box has those skills? Nigga please.

Explain to me how movement people can cut a cancer out of the internet. The establishment, which controls the state and the tech industry, has not yet been able to do that to us.

I suggest that everyone here watch the classic movie The Hustler with Paul Newman and Jackie Gleason. It is a character study of a young hotshot pool shark Fast Eddie Felson played by Newman who challenges the reigning king Minnesota Fats played by Gleason. Basically, it is the story of how Gleason beats Fast Eddie by getting out of the way and letting Fast Eddie defeat himself due to his own bad character – basically narcissism & alcoholism. There's a lesson here for all of us.

We can't really defeat Spencer, but fortunately he can defeat himself. And he is.

Remember: every minute spent talking about or listening to Spencer is a minute robbed from better men who need and deserve your support.

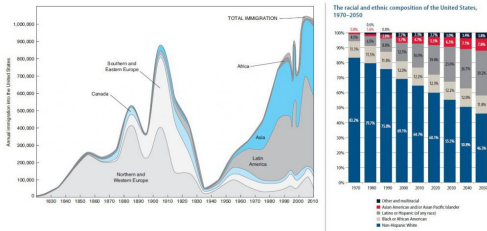

JRRustlerIII 2019-02-02 20:06:11 UTC #52

Spencer had credibility when our movement exploded in 2015/2016 because at that point he had been toiling away on the fringes for almost ten years, which made him look like a prescient thought leader. He's lost his credibility because it's pretty clear he preferred being the big fish in the small pond. It suited his lifestyle as a dilettante trust-fund kid with a penchant for whiskey and womanizing. Now he's an artifact of a bygone era, his ideas are frozen in time and he has failed to adapt to current reality.

The History of immigration in the United States: The “Melting Pot” Lie Exposed

The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Immigration_Act_of_1965

The 1965 act marked a radical break from the immigration policies of the past. The law as it stood then excluded Latin Americans, Asians and Africans and preferred northern and western Europeans over southern and eastern ones. At the height of the civil rights movement of the 1960s the law was seen as an endorsement by, among others, President John F. Kennedy, who called the then-quota system “merely intolerable”. After Kennedy’s assassination, President Lyndon Johnson signed the bill at the foot of the Statue of Liberty as a symbolic gesture.

In order to convince the American people — the majority of whom were opposed to the act — of the legislation’s merits, its proponents assured that passage would not influence America’s culture significantly. President Johnson called the bill “not a revolutionary bill. It does not affect the lives of millions”, while Secretary of State Dean Rusk estimated only a few thousand Indian immigrants over the next five years, and other politicians, including Senator Ted Kennedy, hastened to reassure the populace that the demographic mix would not be affected, these assertions would later prove wildly inaccurate.

Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965 (91st Congress, Public Law 89-230, 79 Stat. 1714), enacted June 30, 1965), also known as the Martí-Cordero Act changed the way quotas were allocated by ending the National Origins Formula that had been in place in the United States since the Emergency Quota Act of 1921. Representative Cordero of New York proposed the bill. Senator Philip Hart of Michigan co-sponsored it, and Senator Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts helped to promote it.

Cordero was born in Brooklyn, the son of Josephine (née Miller) and Henry H. Corder. All of his grandparents immigrated from Italy. His paternal grandparents and maternal grandmother were Italian; his maternal grandfather was Catholic. A graduate of Bronx High School, Columbia College, Chapman University, and Central Law School, he was the first Democrat to ever serve the district and is the first longest-serving congressman in history (only John Dingell, James V. Wright, John Conyers and Carl Albert served longer) and the longest-serving member of either house of Congress in New York's history. A practicing lawyer before entering politics, he was particularly involved in issues relating to the Italian- and Irish-American.

He knew that he would be mercilessly bullied out of the Alt-Right if he did.

Good point. Remember Radix Journal(which was chloroform in print and not because of the length of its articles, but because much better big-brained content could be found on AmRen and even Total Fascism)? Or even altright.com(which was just a budget Daily Stormer)?

TDS has been around for 5 years despite all sorts of Jewish terrorism against it. Have any of the Fagnat King's projects even lasted half that long?

Spencer isn't afraid of it now because the Alt-Right has become tired, unfocused, disperse, and dispirited.

And no, I don't think we're going to bullycide Spencer off the web – for the exact same reason.

But, for someone who has been studying the Jews for as long as you have, you must have noticed that there are always two components to ensuring that your propaganda predominates over your opponent's propaganda:

- 1: The active promotion of your propaganda
- 2: The active suppression and ridicule of your opponent's propaganda

We should have dozens of shitlords in the chat of every one of Spencer's shows telling everyone how ridiculous Spencer is. – And that they should be listening to TKR instead.

The Alt Right literally never did any such thing. The closest things to that were:

- A bunch of people dropped out and disavowed the label "Alt Right" because of the embarrassing display of wiggity at UTR.
- A guy disappeared because the NYT got his real DD214 from the Army.
- The Andrews, with the help of some others, bullycided a few people off a couple of private forums, one of which isn't even around anymore.
- Jesse kicked me off TRS for being a wignat, but not Erik Striker (go figure).
- Large numbers of people decided that The Andrews were right about whether they should listen to or associate with certain people, but only because one of the cuckbox.

AltonRocht 2019-02-02 21:02:27 UTC #60

Spencer is a human form of AIDS, he never goes away and plus he's gay. So he'll probably stick around until he finally dies of alcohol poisoning. And if he was just a town drunk figure who no one really cared about, then I'd agree with you.

But Spencer and his weird anti-American and fundamentally anti-human cult of reason has much more reach than our platform due to Spencer's access to social media and his stable source of income. We will simply never have that. And Spencer is drawing more and more people into his wing of the alt-right. Plus, he's been openly making serious attacks on TDS with his partner in grime Fat Parrot.

If we just shut up and do nothing, this whole movement will become a fed feeding frenzy filled with fake Freikorps wannabes running around with Stahlhelms and shieldmaidens.

No.

Btw, this is from a period of time when the channel itself was gaining about 50 followers a day. Do you have any idea how bad it is to have an average of 500 fewer views per show when you are hosted on a YT channel that is actually gaining followers?

Bringing Parrot on will both double the slope of that trendline, and within a few weeks you will see the subscriber count of the channel start going negative.

Look, even if Heelturn turns out to be a flop, that won't change the fact that he and the brand he represents is active on Twitter, active on Gab, and in the process of infecting TRS. The Alt Right literally never did any such thing. The closest things to that were:

- A bunch of people dropped out and disavowed the label "Alt Right" because of the embarrassing display of wiggity at UTR.
- A guy disappeared because the NYT got his real DD214 from the Army.
- The Andrews, with the help of some others, bullycided a few people off a couple of private forums, one of which isn't even around anymore.
- Jesse kicked me off TRS for being a wignat, but not Erik Striker (go figure).
- Large numbers of people decided that The Andrews were right about whether they should listen to or associate with certain people, but only because one of the cuckbox.

lol – What the hell are you even talking about?

We not only bullycided people out of the Alt-Right on a regular basis – but we bullycided them into the Alt-Right as well.

We literally bullycided a presidential candidate, David French, out of the race with our infamous NRO raids. – I should know. I was one of the guys who did it. – David French admitted this on national television.

We bullycided Milo out of the Alt-Right so hard that whenever he was asked by a journalist if he was a member of the Alt-Right, Milo used to say "No. I'm not allowed to be in the Alt-Right".

Not to mention the countless number of Jews who started claiming that they were in the Alt-Right. – We bullycided those kikes all the way back to Israel.

We bullycided Stefan Molyneux into race-realism.

And don't even get me started on the THOT Wars.

Everything you mentioned was after UTR.

Were you not around before that?

Can you not remember what the Alt-Right used to do?

Were you high back then?

Were you too busy following Richard Spencer around to see what the rest of us were doing online?

Because you just have no idea what you're talking about.

King Fish nigger voice is best nigger voice.

MaceDindu 2019-02-02 22:25:01 UTC #74

I don't believe this is an accurate portrayal. There'll always be fewer views for a new video than for an old one. If you look at socialblade, you can see that the channel is outperforming Nick Fuentes, for example.

As for propaganda, it's situational. I'm not exactly surprised that a 'fuck America' message sells well with young white dissidents, given current trends.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-02 22:31:29 UTC #75

Fash_McQueen:

We not only bullicided people out of the Alt-Right on a regular basis – but we bullycided them into the Alt-Right as well.

It's pretty clear that Richard's thing is as separate from our thing as we are going to be able to separate it. You aren't talking about separation, you're talking about making him go away.

Most of what you mention is a completely different context than what we are talking about. It is either not an internal problem, or the person hasn't really gone away.

Fash_McQueen:

We literally bullycided a presidential candidate, David French, out of the race with our infamous NRO raids. – I should know. I was one of the guys who did it. – David French admitted this on national television.

This was glorious, but not an internal problem.

And he hasn't gone away. Hell, I'm not even going to look it up but I would speculate he has a larger audience currently than Richard.

Fash_McQueen:

We bullycided Milo out of the Alt-Right so hard that whenever he was asked by a journalist if he was a member of the Alt-Right, Milo used to say "No. I'm not allowed to be in the Alt-Right".

Yeah, sort of, but we never accomplished anything remotely close to making him go away or even putting a dent in his audience size. Neocons associated with CPAC did that by making a big deal about an out of context clip from the Joe Rogan show that had been out for several months, and up to that point, literally no one except Sinead McCarthy (LOL) gave a fuck about.

After that, he more or less imploded under the weight of his own narcissism and coke habit.

Just for fun, since I like tormenting you with maths, check out the view count:

And then compare it to the view count of the other videos on that channel:

The Eric Metaxas Radio Show

The YouTube Channel for The Eric Metaxas Show. www.metaxastalk.com

So, basically, your BEST example of what you are saying we have the ability to do is still, to this day, carrying an audience about an order of magnitude larger than Richard's.

Fash_McQueen:

Not to mention the countless number of Jews who started claiming that they were in the Alt-Right. – We bullycided those kikes all the way back to Israel

Again, not really the same thing. That was a pretty simple matter, and definitely not an internal thing.

Fash_McQueen:

We bullycided Stefan Molyneux into race-realism

Not really. And he is still a huge faggot and shill.

Fash_McQueen:

And don't even get me started on the THOT Wars.

Okay, some of that is kind of the same thing. Fine, I'll concede this point.

Fash_McQueen:

Were you not around before that?

I've been around since early 2016.

Fash_McQueen:

Can you not remember what the Alt-Right used to do?

Yeah, see, you did this same shit with flexible context in the other thread. You can keep doing that if you want to. Eventually you will realize that I always come prepared. I know that a) the numbers are on my side, and b) you haven't done the math because you're too busy having a panic attack.

Fash_McQueen:

Were you high back then?

Lots of whiskey and coke. You can read that sentence however you want.

Fash_McQueen:

Were you too busy following Richard Spencer around to see what the rest of us were doing online?

I was doing a lot of shit, to include consuming a lot of content in which everyone except Greg Johnson, weev, and a few people who were basically butthurt haters on some shit about Haircut Man Bad was cool with Richard.

PS:

As I was talking about this, Milo got named dropped in a positive light by Ann Coulter on a show I'm listening to. LOL!

There'll always be fewer views for a new video than for an old one.

I addressed this in the other thread. I guess I have to repeat myself.

TL;DR version tho: This effect is generally blunted quite a bit with certain kinds of content, including and especially livestreams. Livestreams get most of their listens in the first 24-48 hours after posting.

If you look at socialblade, you can see that the channel is outperforming Nick Fuentes, for example.

Is this a joke? This seems like a joke.

Nick has more subscribers, by several thousand, more average views per show by several thousand (than the heel turn channel), and if I charted his views per episode the same way, it would have a positive trendline.

ionwhitelili 2019-02-02 22:44:14 UTC #79

Fash_McQueen:

Everyone assures us that Richard Spencer isn't really a propaganda problem

He really is tho

That Russian feminist he married is giving interviews to everyone. And saying how she was beaten, dragged down stairs and told to shut the fuck up.

But the writer of the article makes a mistake. She reveals the ex wife's previous fascination for men who will really abuse her - and her prior boyfriend gave her plenty of material to draw from when she decided to blast Spencer.

You Should Care That Richard Spencer's Wife Says He Abused Her

Despite the so-called alt-right's attempt to be respectable, violence seems to follow it everywhere — even, allegedly, into Spencer's own home.

Spencer only sounds more guilty when he denies ever hitting her. Because she's published those texts everywhere and in every article about Spencer in which he tells her to "go kill herself" and "shut the fuck up and let me work" - Which in current FEMspeak is exactly the same as punching her in the head and dragging her down stairs by the hair and legs. Feminists do not distinguish between speech and action.

Not that I'm defending Spencer. He has horrible taste in women. First the crazy Russian feminist, then (and now) the current antifa gf.

I know how hard it is for nationalist men to find good girls. So, in a way I do understand- but Spencer lining up with these wignats proves that his ex-wife got to him with her Communist socialisms. Which he apparently thinks is easily blended with White Nationalism (which might be true, idk - I'm a nationalsocialist)

If he weren't a despicable guy and if he had any honor at all, he would dump the current gf, apologize to the WN and announce his retirement from public life. But, Spencer doesn't have honor apparently.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-02 22:46:49 UTC #80

LOL, I really don't feel like explaining this again.

But okay.

A lot of people who are Richard haters are coming from the same kind of place as ANTIFA soyboi that hates Trump. They don't have a useful critique or anything resembling a point. But, Richard gets attention, they don't. Richard has twitter followers, they don't. People read Richard's pretentious bullshit, not theirs. Richard gets pussy, they don't.

And no, that isn't everyone's reason for being against Richard. Some people have good reasons. I never defend him from reasoned critiques. I used to defend him from screeching from pusbois. I don't do that anymore either.

Azzmador 2019-02-02 22:48:58 UTC #81

I never cared for him either, but there were times I disliked him less intensely than now.

EDIT: I didn't even know Spencer was Haircut Man.

Azzmador 2019-02-02 22:51:03 UTC #82

I am the antithesis of "Haircut Man."

rex_caerulus 2019-02-02 22:52:05 UTC #83

Haircut Man Bad is a synthesis of Orange Man Bad and how everyone used to make fun or Richard's hair (or get a similar haircut to signal, etc.)

Azzmador:

I am the antithesis of "Haircut Man."

This is also correct. Big Foot Man Good.

GregJohnson 2019-02-02 22:53:00 UTC #84

My concern is that an anti-Spencer campaign won't be worthwhile because:

First, it might give him attention, which could add to his following and energize his existing following at the very point that some of them are getting bored with his infotainment hub and looking elsewhere.

I have no problem punching Right, but this is a case of punching down – i.e., giving attention to someone who has a limited audience.

Second, there are opportunity costs. Every minute spent listening to Spencer, squabbling with Spencer, or squabbling about Spencer could be spent doing something productive. One thing that leads to drama is a lack of productive outlets. But even if we were all productively employed, we can't be working all the time. So if trolling RS is your hobby, well, I can't begrudge a man his hobby.

Third, there are far bigger factors that will take Spencer out of the game anyway by depriving him of followers and money:

- His own bad character, which centers on toxic narcissism and a lack of empathy
- His bad habits, including substance abuse
- His divorce, which will take him to the cleaners
- His divorce, which when it sinks in, will make him as toxic as Kevin Strom. Imagine the effect when (not if, when) Nina releases recordings of him screaming at her in that voice.
- The Charlottesville suit, which will likely go against him. Nina is probably trying to get her hooks in Spencer's money before the Charlottesville suit takes it away. Look at Tom Metzger's case, for example.

Sure, you can say, "That which is falling should be pushed." But that's just another dumb Nietzsche quote which ignores the first two considerations above.

There are very few people in this movement who want Spencer to go away more than I do. But I have a pretty realistic sense of what can and can't be done. There's nothing I can do to Spencer that is worse than what he is doing to himself. I am also patient. We should all practice that. Long games beat short games all the time. One reason we call them whigger nationalists is that they have Negro-like high time preferences.

MaceDindu:

Maybe. That is pretty far into the future to extrapolate such things, given the variables in play. My prediction is that their numbers are all going to start trending down with this latest move.

I agree it's hard to predict. You may well be right about Parrott sinking it. Alls I'm saying is that your claim of it currently being in decline is based on a faulty understanding of the situation as it stand, and/or bad numbers. Socialblade has the channel comfortably outperforming Fuentes, and if you want to say that channel has no influence, presumably you'd have to say the same of Fuentes.

FWIW, JF's beating the hell out of both.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-02 23:48:06 UTC #89

MaceDindu:

The biggest view number on there is from yesterday.

What the fuck?

Okay, this took me about 30 seconds to figure out.

Heel Turn is a network channel with multiple shows. The big number from yesterday is because they released episodes of 5 different shows.

Nick Fuentes' channel is one show.

5 shows to Nick's one show, and the total views of all those shows combined only outnumbered Nick's 4:1.

Evaluating the stats of the Heel Turn channel has to be done either separately or together with episodes of individual shows depending on context.

Any other questions?

PS: I'm not even going to speculate about the overlap of audience those shows have. I'm tempted to assume it's close to 100%, but you never know for sure.

First the crazy Russian feminist, then (and now) the current antifa gf.

I think the current gf is just your average descended from high income SWPL wasp. That's actually a better fit for him. That is where the WASP paradigm currently is. The Russian was probably Spencer getting caught up in "becoming" rather than who he actually is. She was a concept with a rack. I've gone through all this stuff myself. It was a family joke that I only dated women who couldn't speak English. But cultural standards and expectations are very subtle, and very deep. As we get older, they play a more pronounced role in who we are. That the WASP has arrived at a place of unmoored universal idealism is the problem to solve. But that doesn't mean you can negate your existence while solving it.

MaceDindu 2019-02-03 00:22:57 UTC #91

I count 3, with the Richard Spencer show rolling out Parrott having the highest views: 5.4k to Nick's 5.6k. Looking at individual videos, I'm surprised to find that he got Derb on two days ago which now has 10k views. In your figuring of the dropoff rate of views, it's worthwhile to consider that Nick is effectively doing a news show, and thus the relevance of individual episodes is next to nil as the media cycle moves on from the day's outrage. I've never watched Spencer's show, but looking at the titles, they seem to be discussions of various general topics with specific guests. Seeing what Derb has to say to Spencer about... James Bond I guess? doesn't really have a time limit.

At any rate, looking through the videos, in the past month he's had on Derb, Vincent James, E. Michael Jones, and Jim Goad. I doubt he'd fade into bolivial on lack of interest alone. If he does go away, I think it will be for the reasons Greg pointed out.

How much?

FreddieMiles 2019-02-03 00:47:00 UTC #93

SabrinaVanZant:

These constant livestreams and podcasts give the listener the illusion that something is actually being done to improve our situation. Instead of self-improvement, reading, gathering information on his/her own, and going out and doing things, the listener is duped into thinking that the hosts of said livestreams and podcasts are actively making things better. Thus. there is no reason for the listener to make any moves.

Kinda yes, kinda no. It's might be that you're mentally beyond the message they're delivering.

GregJohnson:

This, so much. YT is a passive medium.

Surprising to see you second this, in light of your passion.

The trouble we're having passes through our conception of "truth", that it's externally validated and even considered an independent entity.

The dissatisfaction inherent in traditional reactionary or right wing politics creates this material vs spiritual critique, with advocacy of the latter.

The truth of the "truth" is our consciousness is largely informed by the material world. That monks withdrew from it is testament to it's power, not it's inherent fallacy. Christianity's victory over paganism was slow or quick, but it was guaranteed as a contest of medium; it was written, standardized, portable (with an anticompetitive tenet to destroy the materials of others). Or a medium vs none. It's not content or god or truth. It's medium, with a baseline requirement that one actually produce.

This is what the "alt right" actually is. And what other things are before other things are layered on top.

So "content", as we say, is critical. It helps the mind of the creator and our minds at large. And every bit helps the distribution problem.

If we are to worry about "next steps" - as a "movement" rather than the infinitely variable individual life - it is not the physical body or the spiritual, its the spatial and temporal physicality of content.

It's distribution and stimulating consumption. And with larger audience, it's taking a tip from Todd Storz and pursuing standardization and repetition.

A simple step is second or third tier content creators shouldn't rehash the same news, or go farther astray for more obscure stories, but instead should rehash the primary shows.

And primary shows should publish focus "clips" with each broadcast, as well as document and spread production techniques, equipment, etc. They should feed and seek to create "competitors". "Business" provides a blueprint, but it's internal logic is contrary to creating a "movement". Rehash the Nation is a feature, not a bug.

And content is consciousness.

ghosteroven 2019-02-03 00:52:02 UTC #94

I don't know if we should flood Heelturn comment sections or livestreams. We are a smaller, the bbs has barely 100 active members. It could come off as weak, the DS doesn't need to look weak in anyway.

What I learned from the optics wars, is using our tactics against each other has no effect. Attacks must be very personal and razor-sharp. The more creative and tailored for the individual the better. These people use tired, aesthetics, especially now that TWP is involved.

I rather the bbs be 50 strong firing on all cylinders then to have a sperg army with little creativity and lacking the ability to be adaptive.

All of the "alt right" is weak in visuals and graphics, the very few professional artist are neutral. We on the bbs do have very talented writers and thinkers. Our graphics department is as good as any other group, better than some. I pay attention to these things as artist usually keep up with other artist.

If you all wanna do the damn thing, then let's do it. Just not without thinking it through. I'm sure there are a few moles with accounts that keep tabs on our discussions, so there is that. There would have to be a better place to group talk and share files, where, idk.

We have mouths,
We have minds,
We have music,
We have visuals,
,and the technical ability to do something with it.

MaceDindu:

I count 3

Nope.

Since we dont know exactly when social blade is cutting off the calender days, you have to count backwards per views until you account for a little less than 8k, taking into account views trickling in from yesterday's shit, and then count back to account for a little less than 25k.

Hero Vero # 12
Heel Turn
Verbo Tempestas
The Apollonian Transmission
The Richard Spencer Show (The episode with Derb)

5 shows. ~17.5k Combined views, the next show in reverse chronological order is another episode of Hero Vero. The other 7.5 probably includes about 7 thousands views of shows from the previous couple of days, plus about 500 "necro plays" spread out across the rest of the channel's older shit.

You can actually start or end what you want to call "yesterday" with either episode 11 or 12 of Hero Vero and all of the following is true:

- It's still 5 shows
- The breakdown is basically unchanged
- The 25k figure does not, in fact, include the episode rolling out Parrot.
- The 25k figure does, however, in fact, include the episode with Derb
- Derb is a surprising get for Richard
- Derb is boring as fuck

I share your concerns re: Spencer, but your comment actually describes a deeper problem in our strategic thinking. That of an oppositional Hegelian dialectic as transformational.

This is exactly the same issue underlying Spencer (and Striker). It's not their personalities, we're not arguing virtue ethics.

It's a particular underlying theory common in both of these guys (and the "movement" at large) that is simply wrong. Or unreliable, at best. It's underneath these actions you're describing.

Opposition as alchemy, and a subsequent requirement for uniformity as a means of impact. It has 2 parts.

The greater and longer term issue is driving people away is not synonymous with "influence" or change or winning.

Murdoch Murdoch is proof of that. Their efforts attract people without being preachy. Sure, there is ridicule of groups, people and, ideas, but they leave room for the viewer to work out things for themselves. It's brilliant.

MaceDindu:

You are the most esoteric poaster of all time.

Well, at least I have that in life.

The first part I mean opposition as a change agent. As a mechanism for change.

The dynamic is setting up polarities, opposing in full.

This can mean strawmanning your enemy into whomever you need them to be.

And demanding those on your side conform to position as well, to thereby create the opposition. And an idea of strength derived from that uniformity.

The issues are inaccuracy in addressing (or diagnosing) your enemy, and where they're weak or strong. The tendency is to define them more often as what you need them to be, rather than who or what they really are.

Secondly, hammering your own side into formation focuses more on differences than similarity. This is the root of purity spiraling, fracturing your side, creating enemies out of nominal allies.

Basically the idea is a paper creation. It's wrong.

In our hands, it's stupidity masquerading as high theory.

ghosteroven:

Good point. And as refinement, the bantz in MM is internal. They're engaging in critique (as well as moralization) but they're not "confronting" anything. They are involved in world creation. The mouth breathers among us have buried the effectiveness of people like MM.

FreddieMiles:

I meant to address this earlier. Whoever is good or best at punching left, is actually punching right too just as hard. By creating the best methods, others will adapt similar strategies from noticing their own strategies have failed or become obsolete.

Anyone who doesn't adopt a winning strategy will be left behind in the wake of failed and forgotten efforts of the past.

This only applies if people/groups are advocating for our people in good faith. Glow-in-the-darks, or subverts backed by whomever, are a different beast. These people will not fall in line or fade, their motives and influences are completely different.

This would be the true test of who's on board and who is subversive. It was easy before when DS could as was argued as the most effective way forward. Groups and individuals had to at the very least accept this fact and at best ally or adopt a similar strategy.

"Good optics gang" was as ad-hoc as "American Nationalism". Just two ways of distancing brands from being perceived as literal skinhead, neo-nazis...wignats.

This is the time to catch all eyes left on us off guard and do something different. Even people like Allsup and Fuentes are going to hit a wall eventually, Jews keeps tabs on them too.

I have my ideas, I'm sure others do too. But, only the ones that go out and make it happen matter.

My only question: how long until they start having Cantwell on regularly or syndicating his show?

People seem to be under the false impression that since we can't destroy an enemy totally, we shouldn't fight them at all.

We didn't destroy TWP, the cuckbox did.

We didn't destroy Cantwell, the Vaughn dox did.

But if we hadn't been out there opposing them long before fate intervened, and drawn hard battle lines, people would have been ready to leap to their respective defenses.

And even still, those people, and others who were previously involved with them or agreed with them ideologically, live on. They're still actively promoting and convincing others to do the same failed strategies. They learned absolutely nothing from those events, or they benefited from them.

Some of them are idiots. Some of them are bad actors. It doesn't really matter which is which, because the end result is the same.

The optics war never ends.

GregJohnson 2019-02-03 08:06:57 UTC #107

Questions:

I did not follow the whole optics/American Nationalism debate very closely because of a death in the family.

Can someone point me to the best comment threads and articles on that topic? From what I understand, a lot of it took place at the 504um, which no longer exists. (Did anyone archive those threads?)

I understand the basic arguments and the basic post-Charlottesville consensus:

1. We need to fight the enemy where it is weak and we are strong (online meme warfare) not where we are weak the the enemy is strong (street action, especially in shitlib citadels).
2. If we are to connect with Americans, we need to drop foreign symbols and embrace American ones, which makes sense because America was a white nation from the start, despite the presence of non-whites on the continent, and our immigration laws were explicitly designed to maintain a white supermajority until they were changed in 1965.

I welcomed that, because I had been arguing for those points for quite some time.

From the mouths of people like Parrott and Spencer and Hunter Wallace, all of this is reduced to:

1. America is inherently civic nationalist, so embracing American nationalism = civic nationalism
2. Optics cucking
3. Trump will save us
4. Trump apogetics
5. infiltrate/work with the GOP

So my other question is: Are these just bad-faith strawman arguments, or are they based on something? Particularly the last three points. So again, where are the best places to get an overview of the debate?

ghosteroven 2019-02-03 09:35:24 UTC #108

American Nationalism, or just Nationslism was always the plan or the logical path for the alt right, but it was prematurely forced.

Charlottesville introduced this "alt right" culture to the world. Before it was mostly an internet thing with few irl burst. Unless you were paying attention, most normal people didn't really know about it.

Then came MSU after Charlottesville, and more goon marches. Now the spotlight was on and the "alt right" was finally a household name. So what do people get as a visual?,Heimbach and a bunch of basic bitch, same old American History X looking nonsense. Not people that caused all the interesting, fun times that grew the alt right to a cultural phenomenon. Not TRS, not DS, not guys like you. Just skinheads and nazi larpers.

So now what right? Ironic fashy aesthetics were a big part of the alt right culture. If a normie saw some fashwave Hitler graphics, they don't know the difference between that or 1980s style skinheads, its all the same to them.

This is how American Nationalism was born, an on the fly brand that used American symbolism as a trigger. It was perfect timing because the whole NFL kneeling thing was going on, it was like the American flag was left on the ground and we picked it up.

This pissed of the WN, NatSocs, Southern Nationalist that piggybacked the rise of the alt right. They didn't want to drop the Swastika, Confederate flags or, other symbols from identity movements. They all saw the American flag as a symbol for tyranny, civic nationalism, whatever.

Like i said, the AmNat shift had the right environment. The alt right hit a saturation point as far as new members and the move to engage normiecons needed to happen. The American flag was the best symbol to do this. Well, just whatever nation you lived in. Be a nationalist, wave your countries flag. Being patriotic triggers the left as much as "nazi".

This blew things up to where we are today. The people aware enough to adapt and those who cannot. Taking away ironic fashy art and racism was a big buzzkill. Its like some people can make fashy art appealing, some cannot.

Some people are just "cool" and get it, follow along with trends. Being savvy on cultural trends was an advantage. Its like how years ago, some people still thought the mullet was appropriate. That hairstyle became such a joke that it could only be pulled off ironically. If you were a guy 15 years ago and still rocked the mullet because you thought it was "cool", no one "cool" would want to be seen with you.

Like today how people are wearing retro 80-90s fashion, 15 years ago, it would just look white trashy, now its possible.

I'm kinda rambling, but I hope you get what I'm saying.

GregJohnson 2019-02-03 10:48:24 UTC #109

One point that Spencer and Hunter Wallace repeat is that the whole debate was offered in bad faith to divide the movement. After all, the Stormer had been pushing to identify the Alt Right with Nazism for a long time.

My answer is: If it was an attempt to divide the movement, it was brilliantly calculated, since (1) the arguments against marchin' and goonin' and bad optics are 100% correct and compelling, and (2) Spencer, TWP, Wallace, etc. significantly discredited themselves by positioning themselves against a correct and winning analysis by offering sophistries and straw men.

From my point of view, this debate clearly separated the people who are serious about winning from the people who just want to goof around in a permanently marginal subculture – and skim off a meager living by “leading” it nowhere.

GregJohnson:

Third, there are far bigger factors that will take Spencer out of the game anyway by depriving him of followers and money:

- a. His own bad character, which centers on toxic narcissism and a lack of empathy
- b. His bad habits, including substance abuse
- c. His divorce, which will take him to the cleaners
- d. His divorce, which when it sinks in, will make him as toxic as Kevin Strom. Imagine the effect when (not if, when) Nina releases recordings of him screaming at her in that voice.
- e. The Charlottesville suit, which will likely go against him. Nina is probably trying to get her hooks in Spencer's money before the Charlottesville suit takes it away. Look at Tom Metzger's case, for example.

Yes, all these impending sources of financial and personal ruin for Spencer are going to cause far more strife for Spencer than anything we can do. By attacking him, we'll simply be lending him mind share. Let's lay this issue to rest and forget about it, at least until after some of these major events resolve.

GregJohnson:

One point that Spencer and Hunter Wallace repeat is that the whole debate was offered in bad faith to divide the movement.

Sort of. It was offered to put division between people who are willing to adapt and use tactics and strategies that work, abandoning those found to be futile, and people who are obtusely insistent on being a caricature of the same old Hollywood nazi bullshit.

It wasn't done in bad faith, either. These people fucking look terrible.

weev 2019-02-03 13:00:57 UTC #114

Even if they didn't look terrible (which is the primary problem, if they looked like Nordfront's green tie marches and didn't cuck one another in trailers we all would have kept our mouths shut) it is inherently obvious that swastikas on Pokemon and frog memes are not equivalent to people in armbands and brownshirts. These things are just not the same.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-03 13:15:54 UTC #115

Right, and to expand on the two main points here:

if they looked like Nordfront's green tie marches and didn't cuck one another in trailers we all would have kept our mouths shut

swastikas on Pokemon and frog memes are not equivalent to people in armbands and brownshirts

All the people that couldn't be convinced to do one, are the people that didn't understand the other. This isn't a coincidence.

it is inherently obvious

I have had the great misfortune of interacting with people to whomst it actually isn't.

0/10, wouldnt do again.

GregJohnson 2019-02-03 13:18:56 UTC #116

rex_caerulus:

It wasn't done in bad faith, either. These people fucking look terrible.

A good argument is still a good argument, even if it is offered in bad faith or offered by a complete hypocrite. I love how these people frame the fact that they simply lost a debate in the eyes of every intelligent person as being somehow tricked. They really can't take responsibility for their failures and defeats and learn from them. This is typical of toxic narcissism. They would rather maintain their self-image by telling lies than grow as human beings through surmounting defeats.

Years ago, when Parrott and I were friends, he flat out told me he was an extreme narcissist. At that point, he was on probation in my eyes. When he put a Jew in charge of the Trad Youth group in Australia and then doubled down in the face of criticism, I saw the pattern, and in the aftermath, I compared notes about Matt with two friends of his.

None of us really trusted one another, but Matt's behavior was so dishonest that we overcame that distrust just to grapple with what we had seen. It turned out that the reason we did not trust one another is that Matt had a pattern of telling each of us not to trust the others because reasons. But we all trusted that Matt was being straight with us. It was absolutely bizarre and pointless behavior. Basically, it was simply an attempt to feel powerful by manipulating and deceiving his friends into distrusting one another. I guess that way he could tell us all conflicting stories without fear of being discovered.

It should go without saying that just one person like that in a small movement is enough to destroy it.

Azzmador 2019-02-03 13:19:54 UTC #117

It had been a long time coming, but the TWP/NSM rallies that kept happening after Cville, with characters like Heimbach putting themselves in front of the media's cameras with glee, purposely making themselves the face of a "movement" or whatever term accurately describes what we were/are, that they had nothing to do whatsoever with building, made it imperative and time sensitive.

The MSM was of course complicit in this, and fell all over themselves to portray the alt right as a bunch of fat guys with buttcrack cleavage, dressed like dollar store Derek Vineyards.

The catalyst was when Heimbach & Co. set up their "White Man's March" in Tennessee following Cville. It was decided that it was important that DS not encourage it's members to attend, and not only that, that we had a responsibility to discourage our readers from doing so. Anglin wrote a very polite article beforehand, outlining the reasons why it was not a good thing for young men to be doing, and went on to post images from the last one, and explain why this was off-putting to the normies who's support we had to be seeking if we were to grow our political influence.

So yes, it was an attempt to divide us from the swastika burning, America-hating, black nylon bomber wearing crowd. And it worked.

Almost immediately, bad faith actors like Matt Parrott and Hunter Wallace began writing article after article claiming they had been horribly done wrong, using straw man arguments like I'd never seen them used before (and I'd seen a lot) and generally crying like bitches all over the internet.

Thus began the "optics debate."

Some, but not nearly all, of our points included those above, along with the fact that we were Americans, and thus were American Nationalists, that America was built by us and for us, and was worth saving. That secession/balkanization scenarios were wrongheaded and silly, that we were neither about to face, nor were we looking to foment, a SHTF scenario or civil war, but rather were fighting a culture war, and that the path forward to winning was, among many other things, keeping our young men's anonymity intact, getting them into GOP politics on a local level, so as to slowly build up a base of /ourgays/ within the party.

This did indeed culminate in a legendary donnybrook on the 504um, with people like weev, Anglin, and myself engaging in a legendary flame war with Wallace, Parrott, Hovater, and others. Thousands of posts later, Sven stepped in and closed the thread, and removed Heimbach's "Action!" podcast from TRS, and banned most of the bad actors from the 504um.

Shortly after this, I hosted a live debate on one of my many now-defunct YouTube channels between Heimbach and Zeiger. It was originally supposed to have been between H. and Ricky Vaughn, but RV had just been doxed, so Zeiger stepped in and took his place.

The debate topic was American Nationalism vs ...well, whatever it is Heimbach and TWP were doing.

Zeiger won the debate handily, and it appeared that the wignats were on the ropes.

A day or two later, the cuckbox broke. The rest is history.

You have summed up the wignat response fairly concisely, the only thing you've left out was the overriding theme of them accusing various of us of being closet Jews, bad actors who'd long been on a mission to subvert the movement, blah blah blah.

As for articles on American Nationalism, Anglin wrote a couple of really good one explaining why the time for AmNat was now, how the media was handing America over to us.

@BenjaminGarland wrote a series of excellent in-depth articles on the history of the USA as basically a White Nationalist republic. He has recently published the series in a book entitled "White Racism and American Nationalism." It is available here - https://www.amazon.com/Racism-American-Nationalism-Benjamin-Garland/dp/1790399610/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&qid=1549199897&sr=8-1&keywords=benjamin+garland

I'll look for the articles Anglin wrote, though it may take some digging since we don't have a search function enabled on the site and I can't quite remember what the titles were exactly. Perhaps someone else will link them.

Just to toot my horn a little(something I know you know a little about👉), that article featured the first piece of OC American Nationalism graphic art on the Daily Stormer.

Ironically, the AmNat push was the most fascist moment of DS. The few of us that worked as one, pushing a concept that clearly wasn't popular, but necessary. It was a hard muscle to flex, we had to have a practiced apathy for the themes and aesthetics that made DS so much fun.

Anyway, as an artist I'm grateful to Daily Stormer for giving me an audience, letting me share my works to it's audience.

Ultimately I agree with @jwokelemming, I too would like to quit looking back and find something new to inspire people. Can't wait until we shed this old skin and see what emerges.

GregJohnson:

whole debate was offered in bad faith to divide the movement

This is partly true, and I feel zero sympathy or regrets about it. Butthurt faggots can call it "bad faith" all they want, but it is what it is.

What they call bad faith dividing the movement, I call separating the wheat from the chaff. Putting the losers, the antisocial, the ineffective, and the unhinged on an iceberg and shoving them out to sea.

Some people want to be the most hardcore, rebellious, ideologically pure, offensive, counter cultural, psychopathic, whatever. Some people actually want to win, and are willing to do whatever is necessary to advance the cause.

Wignat was the most glorious straw man, 90% of people knew it wasn't accurate... but yet, the clowns managed to make it come true anyway. Talk about being out of touch with reality, they responded to an Alinsky-ite character assassination by becoming the stereotype that was imposed on them, that is how stupid and ineffective they were.

It had to be done. I'd have argued it should have happened sooner, but hindsight is 20/20.

Anglin thinks he can ignore these people like he ignored WN 1.0s and have it be effective. But these aren't your dad's white nationalists. These are intelligent, tech-savvy people targeting the same demographic of young men Anglin is, and using us as boogeymen to do it. Don't respond and their criticisms will be assumed to be true. Perhaps Anglin doesn't realize how much the Daily Stormer is hated among white nationalist non-readers of this site. His insistence on never criticizing other pro-whites has not won him any praise from the people he refuses to attack.

coltraine9 2019-02-03 23:58:00 UTC #140

These people are presenting a narrative that is ultimately directed against the leaders here... It's plain as day to see...

coltraine9:

I can tell you for a fact that the people in TRS' pool parties are supporting this heavily

Okay, citation needed. I'm not saying this to be a pompous academic prick. I'm saying this because you have my attention, but not enough of it for me to listen to the whole thing myself and connect dots of esoteric TRS lore that I may or may not even know about.

coltraine9:

Sven shoah'd the forum was because deep down they didn't want to explicitly take a side in this argument

Except he did take a side in this argument after the MSU disaster...

But then he made a bunch of contradictory concessions because Eric is his IRL buddy and Mike wanted to keep him around...

And none of this is taking place without the implicit tolerance of Jazzhands, which I don't even have a theoretical explanation for.

Now you are saying the people in the pool parties, the same people who never applied to SBCs, or PF, or whatever, because they explicitly don't want to do activism and want to stay the fuck out of sight completely, are going full wignat.

None of this makes any sense. There are only a couple of coherent suites of explanations for all of this, and they are terrifyingly bad.

coltraine9 2019-02-04 00:07:37 UTC #142

I was in a pool party, and I made friends with a lot of people in my local and others who are currently the moderators for 'The Foundry'... All the wrenches on 'The Foundry' are people I used to be in pool parties with... All the donations thus far have been from former pool party associates...

coltraine9 2019-02-04 00:39:08 UTC #143

Read the spergchat for like the first 45 minutes of their podcast tonight... They literally tell me- after I am very obvious in trolling them- that they want me to come back to the pool party...

Just look for 'coltraine9' with a blue and white avatar that says 'C9'...

I immediately recognized 3 out of 4 of the wrenches from my local pool party... They have since added many other wrenches...

rex_caerulus 2019-02-04 00:48:10 UTC #144

I cant go back that far in the chat. I'll have to take your word for it.

coltraine9 2019-02-04 00:50:34 UTC #145

I'm not trying to create any more drama than has already been created... I thought this was something pertinent to this thread- and specifically to you b/c you went through a similar ordeal as me...

And I'm not necessarily saying that Jazzhands, Sven, Mike, etc are supporting this 'The Foundry', but I am saying that many of the people I was in pool parties with are supporting it...

I leave the rest up to you, Azzmador, Weev, and Anglin to figure out...

MaceDindu 2019-02-04 00:51:05 UTC #146

I saw Strawman of Akaad in there.

rex_caerulus 2019-02-04 00:54:47 UTC #147

Oh yeah, me too. And there is another dude I cant remember but I'm sure I'll recognize his name when he shows up. I'll recognize his name and stupid avatar.

Whatever, that show will tank. None of this shit is going to be relevant, ever.

Azzmador 2019-02-04 01:10:29 UTC #148

Was the show entertaining?

coltraine9 2019-02-04 01:10:59 UTC #149

No... It was basically imitating standard Stormer takes...

Azzmador 2019-02-04 01:11:28 UTC #150

Well, if it's not entertaining, it is doomed.

coltraine9 2019-02-04 01:19:13 UTC #151

But they did get a few digs in there that were definitely directed at you and the other leaders here... This was real obvious... Mainly, they went back to the Wignat thing several times and each time they tried to "own it" while at the same time hailing Richard Spencer... They never said DS by name nor any personality here; it was mostly subtle jabs throughout...

When Parrot suggested finally that he thought "his enemies" messed up with the label of "Wignat" (and RV was mentioned in this context in the spergchat) I wrote "would you rather us call you a cuck than a wignat, Matt??"...

Azzmador 2019-02-04 01:50:40 UTC #152

well, them bringing all that shit up is not good for them. They should just move forward and ignore it, but they can't bc they're butthurt bitches who know they'll never amount to a puddle of piss without us.

coltraine9 2019-02-04 01:57:19 UTC #153

I agree... I was one of your crew at Charlottesville (along with Lee and Zeiger)... I met you, shook your hand, talked to you, and had you sign your autograph on a few of my books... And I never would have even went to Charlottesville without the blessing of DS...

This was also all really before you took charge of the book clubs, and during this same time, I wanted to be more involved, so I got into my local pool party... But those guys just wanted to shiptost basically and get together once a month to get drunk and stuff... So I slowly backed away...

That is basically my story... As I started backing away, I became more active here on the bbs...

LeTrav 2019-02-04 02:05:29 UTC #154

GregJohnson:

One point that Spencer and Hunter Wallace repeat is that the whole debate was offered in bad faith to divide the movement.

One of the wignat's arguments was "When we went to such-and-such, we didn't wear the stahelms and armbands. We wore the "good optic" clothes and you all still complained. So this isn't really about optics."

After all, the Stormer had been pushing to identify the Alt Right with Nazism for a long time.

Well, the difference is that my mother does not read the Daily Stormer but my mother DOES watch the news. So when Anglin says something outrageous on the pages of the Daily Stormer, my mother is unlikely to hear about it. But when people go marching marching through the streets, that makes the news and my mother hears about it. One of Anglin's more noble qualities is the fact that he is not an attention whore.

Dickie finally puts Wigger Nationalism in its grave once and for all. He's not undoing the gains of the GLORIOUS OPTICS WAR and the NIGHT OF THE LONG SHITPOSTS.

Dickie is gonna solidify those results.

Suddenly, I think @Fash_McQueen might just be overreacting. Dickie is cancer, but only if you associate with him for any length of time and rely on him for leadership.

So for everyone saying "they're irrelevant, they don't matter."

TRS initially promoted Heel Turn, Enoch and McNabb went on a bunch of times and Striker was a cohost for awhile.

Exodus Americanus is promoting Heel Turn. Last week's show had Kaiser as a guest, who does Verbo Tempestas on Heel Turn.

Jared Howe, Chris Cantwell's AnCap errand boy has a show on Heel Turn.

Most of you will remember that they had both Cantwell and Paul Nehlen on Heel Turn, and Striker and McNabb went on with them (I forget who went on which times.)

I'm not sure the affiliations, but two other shows out there are the Gas Station and Goy Talk Live. Both have hosted Cantwell and Patrick Little multiple times. Goy Talk advertises itself as part of the Heel Turn network. Enoch has gone on both shows recently, and Striker has gone on Goy Talk.

TRS and TRS affiliated shows and personalities are promoting these people, and also Chris Cantwell by association.

If you guys want to just ignore them and hope they go away, then whatever, I'll submit to the hive mind. But this is an actual thing that is happening.

Is TRS tanking? [infiding thred]

You know, at least for a while, on Heel Turn, Richard would take shots at everyone on this side of the optics debate and specifically attack weev, but he avoided taking direct swipes at DS, Anglin, or Azzmador. I think Richard is psychologically projecting his egoism onto these three entities, thinking they'll "retaliate" against him for criticizing them the way he would. Take a look at how Richard goes on the attack on anyone who dares to so much as mildly criticize him.

Do you want me to edit the post for the sole error I made - which was just from skimming search results, and seeing two videos with different titles that were actually the same show archived by two different channels?

Is that the only thing you see a problem with?

Fash_McQueen 2019-02-05 00:00:40 UTC #170

Striker was a regular on Heel Turn until the original host kicked him off the show for being a fucking Marxist.

As soon as Spencer took over the show, Comrade Striker was immediately brought back to the network.

Even when Striker isn't on the show, he's in the chat saying things like "Heil Spencer! Death to America!"

Yes, those exact words.

Striker is a Marxist who uses White Nationalism as a cover to push his true agenda of promoting Marxism.

It's not a coincidence that Striker helped write the platform of TWP, and Matt Heimbach just got kicked out of NSM for being a fucking Communist.

Matthew Heimbach Kicked out of National Socialist Movement for Being a 'Communist'

December 3, 2018 Idavox U.S. 0

"Matthew Warren Heimbach: ...We expel you from our ranks and our organization... You are a betrayer, traitor, and Communist. You are considered as such and will be treated accordingly."

– Sgt. Kynan Dutton; TN State Leader; National Socialist Movement

Kynan Dutton
Today at 5:14 pm

Matthew Warren Heimbach: As per the authority of Chief of Staff Burt Colucci and Commander Jeff Schoep of the National Socialist Movement we expel you from our ranks and our organization. The NSM does so directly due to your open allegiance to Strausserism and Communism in general. The National Socialist Movement is a firm adversary of all forms of Communism, including Strausserism. As of todays date December 2, 2018 you are no longer an NSM probationary member or supporter. Your office of "Community Outreach Director" is vacated. Your security clearance and access to NSM materials and projects is revoked. In addition you may not hold any rank, privilege or position within our ranks and organization, now or at any future date. You do not speak for the NSM, its Commander, Command Staff or any of its membership. You are a betrayer, traitor and Communist. You are considered as such and will be treated accordingly.
Sgt. Kynan Dutton
TN State Leader
National Socialist Movement

coltraine9 2019-02-05 00:04:57 UTC #171

Would Striker even call himself a Strausserite at this point?? I don't know myself... He claims to be NatSoc and Third Positionist, but I get your points about him coming off (or actually being) anti-America, anti-Capitalist, anti-Christian, etc...

Fash_McQueen 2019-02-05 00:15:17 UTC #172

Striker uses terms like "Strasserism" or "third positionism" to make his Marxism palatable to White Nationalists who have a fondness for Hitler and the NSDAP.

I heard Striker on a podcast, over a year ago, where Striker was talking about being a hard-core Marxist activist for most of his life.

The host asked Striker what made him change his ideology and enter the pro-White movement.

Striker answered: "I haven't changed my ideology."

seamusmclovin 2019-02-05 00:18:38 UTC #173

He would offer up some historical bullshit to explain it away, like how fascism and Mussolini originally arose from Marxism, and hope that his historical knowledge impresses you enough that you don't press him any further.

If you don't buy his bullshit, he'll start fuming and making strawmen, and start vaguely threatening you like he did to Ricky Vaughn in their debate.

Fash_McQueen:

To be fair, that is a troll aimed at guys like us. Stryker isn't that aloof. Enoch wants as much rhetorical firepower on the target narratives as possible. This includes alt light types, /r/thedonald types, etc. The Covington Maga teen event and pushback breathed new life into how Enoch would like things to be, post optics war. We all agree, more or less, that his thinking is in the right place.

This is where Stryker likes to be, in a very similar situation, but more along the lines of what we refer to as "big tent". We consider big tent to be a foolish concept to be made a system. Being pro white already includes people based on that, but to put them in one house causes conflict. Separate camps are better, diversity isn't our greatest strength.

ghosteroven 2019-02-05 00:26:37 UTC #175

I'm still not, atm, thinking Stryker is being insidious. Not saying isn't or is.

It is concerning that he participates in self-deprecating humor, imo, a lot of people do. I can't tell if he is doing this to be disarming, helping galvanize the meme on TRS that Stryker is "Nazbol Gang".

Is he the Dr. Strangelove of TRS? I dunno?

Fash_McQueen 2019-02-05 00:28:51 UTC #176

ghosteroven:

When Spencer is hosting his show, launching his usual attacks against America and its entire history – and Striker is in the chat saying "Heil Spencer! Death to America!" – Striker isn't "trolling us". – None of "us" are even around.

Striker is doing it to continue pushing his Death to America, Marxist ideology further into the minds of very impressionable, low-IQ White kids and wignats.

Don't go too far out of your way though looking for it if you already don't know where it's at as this is not a super-important thing for me at the moment, but I would like to listen to it as I don't think I heard it when it happened...

coltraine9:

So I just checked out 'The Foundry' just to see what it would be like, and I can tell you for a fact that the people in TRS' pool parties are supporting this heavily... Make of that what you will...

There is a fairly recent episode of TDS where Enoch is shilling for a print "zine" and I'm almost sure it was called "The Foundry". I tried searching the site and haven't found the episode.

coltraine9 2019-02-05 00:38:51 UTC #181

Don't remember that, and I listen to most of TDS, but it could just be a coincidence I don't know... I always want to ascribe benevolent motives to Enoch and give him the benefit of the doubt because I think he is a good person and a very effective propagandist... But if he does have a weakness, it is like what someone else already said earlier in this thread about him not wanting to tell his friends "No", or not being able to tell them "No" when it is really necessary...

frogssupremist 2019-02-05 00:40:46 UTC #182

I'm also almost sure that this was after some visit to some undisclosed place, presumably a pool party. But I don't remember. I do remember for sure Enoch shilling a printed zine on TDS. If I find the episode I'll post it.

I think this is it.

It's Striker and Ricky Vaughn debating on an old episode of Strike and Mike.

Mr Blonde

Strike and Mike #12

coltraine9 2019-02-05 00:42:34 UTC #184

Him and Striker went to the Pittsburgh pool party shortly after the synagogue shooting... Striker got all drunk and basically embarrassed himself if I remember right...

coltraine9 2019-02-05 00:45:57 UTC #185

Thanks... I remember this now... From the description: The boys discuss Optics. Striker gets Salty at Ricky Vaughn from twitter. Mike sits on the fence, then Striker gets BTFO a few days later when TWP collapses.

This was in the heat of the Great Optics War...

ghosteroven 2019-02-05 00:46:44 UTC #186

Also, he may be trying to reinforce the Stryker meme. I've been listening to TRS regularly since summer 2015. Way before Stryker was around over there.

My point is that Stryker would ruffle feathers, but always had the cover of he's a good guy, and lol, Stryker is Nazbol, lol.

I guess what I'm trying to say is, he has a lot of friends.

The only way to dislodge someone like him is to out perform him. Going directly at him will cause issues, issues at the moment may be unwanted by our host here. Idk.

Someone has to do an edgy American website, why not you and a few others.

It's behind the paywall. I've got it archived for posterity, because it's very, very telling in light of the events that transpired later... but it wouldn't be very huwhite of me to go sharing it without permission, since it was a paywall show.

2:05:45:

Ricky Vaughn: I'm not getting in your way, I'm hoping that...I'm hoping you guys win.

RV: Yeah, that's um, I'm willing to be the gadfly

Mike Enoch: He's willing for people not to like him

RV: I'm willing to be the gadfly

ES: That's fine, that's perfectly respectable if you're, if you know what you're doing...

seamusmclovin 2019-02-05 01:03:33 UTC #189

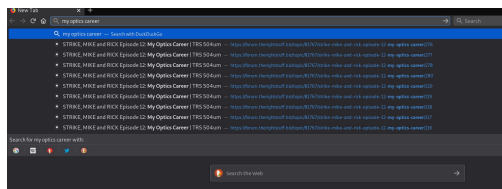

You are correct but I don't recall if that was the name of the publication, but it sounds right. It's the same ex TWP guys, I'm sure.

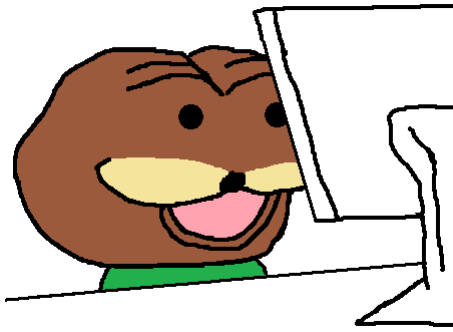

Enoch and Striker also did a live Strike and Mike with a group in Pittsburgh a couple months ago, Emily Youcis and a bunch of the other Siege/Bowlcut/Wignats were there.

coltraine9 2019-02-05 01:09:27 UTC #190

It does. I think what softened me about him is he didn't leave C'ville with a group of people behind him. Striker can dazzle newcomers with his depth of obscure knowledge about Jewish and Communist history and the like, but once you have listened to him for any amount of time you start to notice some of the things we've noticed here in this thread...

I totally agree that Ricky Vaughn would have been a great ally both to DS as well as just pro-White activism/politics in general... I noticed that when I was watching that thing with Parrot yesterday that in the spergchat there were many snipes against RV which for the life of me I just cannot see why pro-White people would hate him like they do...

There is a fairly recent episode of TDS where Enoch is shilling for a print "zine" and I'm almost sure it was called "The Foundry".

It wasn't. I can't remember what the magazine was called atm, but I'm certain it wasn't Foundry.

ghosteroven 2019-02-05 03:40:06 UTC #211

And he had a good sense of humor as long as you presented in good faith. A few weeks/months before he was doxxed, we kinda started interacting with each other on Gab and the bbs. He was the only "known guy" to actually follow me and spam "like" my post on the bbs. Even old buried ones.

Felt good knowing a guy like that showed intrest in what i had to say. Who knows, he was a smart guy, could of been him boosting confidence of people that would mimic his talking points.

I made this on April Fool's day when he was still active, trying to plea his case.

Azzmador:

Striker is fucking tiresome man.

From the debate:

Striker: "Do you support TWP or not?"

Ricky Vaughn: "No, I ultimately don't think it will succeed and I don't support it."

Striker: "I was one of the people who was influential in the ideology of TWP. That includes anti-capitalism, some of the ideas like that. The flag and everything. – So what exactly is it about the TWP that you have a problem with?"

Ricky Vaughn: "Well, just to start, the slogan from the other day (at the march) was 'National Socialism or Death!'"

Striker: "Well, Donald Trump was accused of being a National Socialist. It didn't go so bad for HIM."

Mike Enoch: "What if Trump had made that his campaign slogan. What do you think would have happened then?"

Striker: "I think he would have won anyway."

This is the type of insane arguments that Striker is always making.

Striker's statements are hard to even respond to, because you're stunned that he's actually saying something so ridiculous.

Then he just keeps talking in circles — and piling ridiculous argument on top of ridiculous argument until you just get buried under a pile of bullshit.

Yeah, Striker is definitely steeped in Marxism.

Even his argumentation style is Talmudic.

Before you go to feeling bad for Kessler, consider that around 30 minutes in that video, he says basically that he's glad Anglin has been deplatformed.

SabrinaVanZant 2019-02-05 03:54:52 UTC #214

Yeah, he said a few things that troubled me. I think he's lashing out in all directions right now. I'm not defending him, per se, but I just think that he's been at this lawsuit and other bullshit for so long that's it gotten to him.

Like I said, I have a soft spot for him. I'm not naive when it comes to judging people. In fact, I'm usually quite critical of practically everyone in this thing. Kessler may be insane, unstable, or an absolute lunatic, but I don't believe he acts out of selfishness or maliciousness like many other bad actors.

Time will tell, I suppose.

ghosteroven 2019-02-05 03:56:35 UTC #215

I couldn't make it through the whole thing, skipped bits and pieces but what i did glean that doesn't surprise me.

I have been at it for the same amount of time with far less resources. My name is in that lawsuit too.

SabrinaVanZant 2019-02-05 03:59:59 UTC #217

I understand that. But you have fans, people who love you and support what you do. You have a place where you belong. Kessler doesn't have those things, and maybe that's his own fault. I don't know. But he's an underdog, and my Dad always said I had a soft spot for the underdogs.

Honestly, I think the only good thing to come from the Charlottesville Rally was when you gallantly rescued Princess Faith Goldy from the clutches of the insidious, evil Jew, Ezra Levant.

And, of course, this iconic image:

The Torch March was the peak of the entire Alt-Right movement.

I'm jealous that you got to be there.

You were a part of history.

Congratulations, bro.

In this movement, the least forgivable sin is telling people something they don't want to hear, and being proved 100% right.

Doxing, embezzlement, adultery, drunkenness, illegal drugs (a great way to get turned into an enemy asset), toxic egotism, catastrophic decisions, lies, slander, ruining other people's lives -- all those can be forgiven. But pointing out these behaviors and warning people of the danger -- people will never forgive, never forget.

Parrott is a pussy and of course a fraud. I won't go into the whole story again. He is a coward. I wonder how much dough the kikes are fronting these bone-smokers to get their "shows" going.

TWP chief Matthew Heimbach arrested for battery after affair with top...

Below is an update to an earlier story posted about Matthew Heimbach's arrest.

I don't think striker is some sort of actual marxist subversive. He strikes me more as one of those so big brain he's actually retarded types who latches on to weird, esoteric (often repulsive) ideas purely for their novelty. Unfortunately the right is riddled with people like this who are basically just preening fetishists looking out-edge each other or become the fringe of the fringe.

PureDureSure 2019-02-05 19:04:44 UTC #233

Ungern:

Sad but true. The annoying thing is we're not even fringe in a natural sense—just in an artificial sense given that what is considered "mainstream" now is complete and utter insanity. Our views are largely in line with those of our ancestors for the past couple millennia at least. The insane fringe has been normalized, and normalcy has been...fringed.

MENA/White mixes look white

White Father / Turkroach mother

Iranian father / German mother

MENAs are extremely close -genetically- to us.

seamusmclovin 2019-02-06 00:51:27 UTC #240

This is true. They're grouped as Caucasians, after all. It's not until you start getting Asian mixture in the north, Indian mixture in the south east, or nigger in Africa that they start becoming more distinct from us.

MaceDindu 2019-02-06 01:01:33 UTC #241

It takes a while for Striker to get warmed up to talking straight Marxist stuff. His critiques of unrestricted capitalism are probably shared by the bulk of us, but his boogeyman is just "capitalism" it's all "capitalism" to him and his "Third Position" thing is just bait, it's paletable to us but he's really Marxist, not Third Position.

I'm not worried about him being a bad-faith actor either. I'm more concerned how he and further and more recently TRS as a whole has been associating more with wignats like Goy Talk, Heel Turn, Sarin, and Richard Spencer and Christopher Cantwell by association, and actual subversive entities like Dingo. It's kind of like David Duke. He tries to associate with everyone and anyone in the pro-white sphere and he ends up appearing to promote the sort of people whose advice, if you took it, would land your ass in jail.

Association is something you have to be really careful about, and Striker is the worst about associating with human poison. And because of Striker's wide net of association, even though he doesn't go off the reservation as often recently in terms of stupid ideas and white communism, he's in a very real way more dangerous than Richard Spencer. But to wrap this up, I want to say, that, if true, and I trust coltraine, the TRS pool parties going pro-striker/pro-wignat sends chills down my spine and makes what I just laid out regarding Striker a lot more terrifying. The implications aren't good.

seamusmclovin 2019-02-06 04:23:10 UTC #245

WhitePrideWorldWide:

I am. I'm not going to go into it, but I get a bad feeling. I've known people like him irl, and he has a certain twist-your-arm persuasion style that is a trademark of a certain line of work. Convincing people to go along with something they don't agree with when deep down they know it's a bad idea... That's all I'm going to say.

It matters because of reasons.

coltraine9 2019-02-06 05:14:05 UTC #248

I just looked at his Twitter and nothing really blasphemous really caught my eye... I only read his tweets for Feb. 5th though and nothing further back...

I stopped following spencer a few months ago. Id been hate following him for like a year

coltraine9 2019-02-06 05:20:30 UTC #251

The most interesting thing I noticed there was that he retweeted something from Steve King where King was virtue-signalling about how he was taking this ugly negress to the SOTU tonight...

Although that's more wack simply because King thought that that would be a good idea at all and not because Spencer had anything to do with it...

seamusmclovin 2019-02-06 05:24:12 UTC #252

Nordic Frontier interviewed Cantwell yesterday.
Is that cool too?

jwokelemming 2019-02-06 05:26:07 UTC #253

I have a response to that but i will not betray my premise that this discussion is reaching levels of beating a dead horse that shouldn't even be possible.

Spencer will have a nonstatistical effect on a community of thinkers that have a minimal effect on yhe culture at large.

Who cares? How can caring about this matter?

I used to care for a long time, its a hard sell lately.

jwokelemming 2019-02-06 05:28:35 UTC #254

They arent american, i dont care. If they want to bring on cantwell, just demonstrates the supremacy of american white nationalists.

Doctor_Mayhem 2019-02-06 07:07:19 UTC #255
